3 to 5 Day Lean Diagnostic Workshop Problem Solving & Value Stream Level

The Lean diagnostic is a 3 -5 day structured approach to evaluate and diagnose the problems, issues and opportunities that lie within a key business process (value stream). The approach involves prioritising, choosing and mapping an 'end to end' process through team based problem solving systematically identifying and eliminating waste

Team Practical Problem Solving

Value Stream Mapping (Current / Future)

+ The purpose is to thoroughly understand the problems, issues, delays, bottlenecks, information flow, authority loops and process issues that extend lead-times, create poor quality, restrict flow of value adding work and lead to disengaged and frustrated people.

+ The ultimate aim is to guide and challenge you using Lean Thinking to create / design a better 'future state' process using tools such as Level Scheduling, one piece flow, Standard Work, Visual Management and develop a plan to get from the current state to the future state through ownership and accountability of the team.

+ The process of getting everyone involved and getting to the same level of understanding is extremely valuable and the relationships, rapport and team building is an essential by product of this process as you aim to streamline your operations and build a team based action plan to move forward.

Comments

"...We thought we had good processes until we looked at them with Lean eyes and realised most of it was non value add...unbelievable insights"

"...I knew of all the tools before but had never used them in a practical way so it was really helpful and it all made perfect sense...."

Key Learning Outcomes:

- Provide some initial basic understanding of Lean, Paradigms and Mapping tools
- Map the 'current state' big picture process 'end to end' through Go Look See
- See and discuss the problems, issues, wastes, variation, delays of the process
- Problem solve with a Lean approach and thinking to develop a 'future state'
- Question and challenge the status quo to reach a future desired target
- Develop a robust plan to reach the 'future state' process
- Project Management approach to ensure agreement for change

The Lean Diagnostic is not a training course but a highly participative workshop that is facilitated with the goal of looking at a key business process to understand the root causes and improve it towards a specified target.

Learner to Master Coach Journey

The Lean Diagnostic helps participants reach a new level of understanding of Lean through this process. It is a 'Learn by Doing' approach and would go towards building further competency towards a Master Lean Coach recognition.

To move through to Master Lean Coach level it is expected that Leaders and coaches could run these workshops with a level of coaching and support and eventually on their own.

The diagnostic process often provides clients with an immediate ROI due to huge savings identified as part of the mapping and development of an aspirational future lean vision.
